Ko Kood

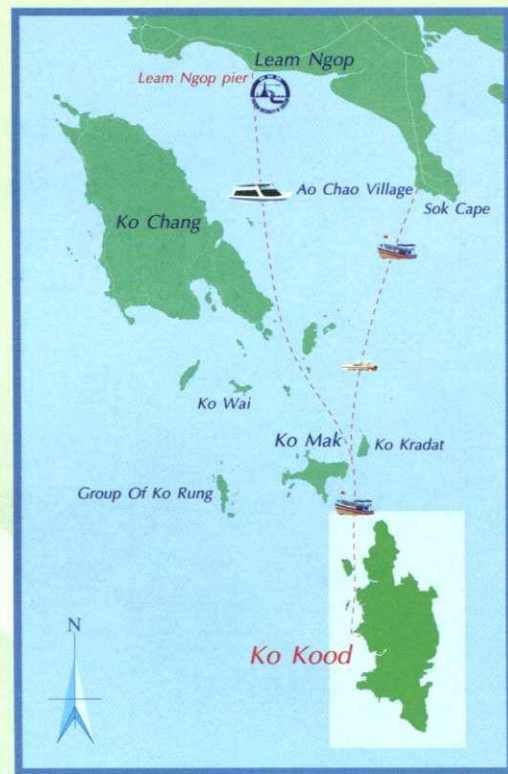

Trat THAILAND

Ko Kood is administrated by a local sub-district authority, and is the southernmost island in the seas of Trat, bordering Cambodian territorial waters. It is the fourth largest island in Thailand and the second largest in Trat. It is about 25 km. long and 12 km. wide and covers an area of approximately 129 km². Ko Kood Sub-district comprises 24 islands; the 9 islands of Mu Ko Mak, 12 islands of Mu Ko Rang and 3 islands of Mu Ko Kood. It has plentiful natural forest and abundant diversity of flora. Most of the island is mountainous, interspersed with plains. Since Ko Kood is so far from the mainland it has remained largely uninfluenced by development. Therefore, it still has many rare species of plants, and its beaches remain wild. The seas are emerald green and the sandy beaches are fine. The island has several bays alternating with rocky coastline and beaches. Coconut and rubber trees can be seen. The mountain streams that flow to the open sea are thickly lined with mangrove forest as far back as the inland waterfalls. The inhabitants of the island are a mixture of Thai and immigrant Khmer from Ko Kong who established the first communities. Ko Kood is now of growing interest to both Thai and foreign visitors, and the growth in accommodation reflects this. Accommodation ranges from guesthouses, to home-stays and resorts. Visitation to the island is limited since it is inaccessible at certain times of the year. The best time to visit is between October and May.

Tourist Attractions on Ko Kood.

Many beautiful beaches are to be found on Ko Kood; mostly located along the entire west coast. A few are also found on the east. The 3-tiered Klong Jaow Waterfall is the most famous waterfall on the island. Water flows throughout the year. It is only accessible by taking a boat upstream through the rich mangrove forests; a short walk of about 1,500 m will then bring you to the falls.

Salad Bay is located to the east of the island. Its community is a fishing hub that hosts the local fleet and fresh market. A few home-stays are available for weary travellers.

Jaak Bay is also located on the east of the island. It is a 500 m. sandy beach good for swimming. Coconut palms line the beach and it is another good location to view the sunrise.

Yai Kerd Bay is a semi-circular bay with accommodation extending into the sea. It is quiet and peaceful, very suitable for nature lovers. A trail cuts through rubber plantations to Kluay Bay, where you can enjoy diving off the cape.

Klong Yai Kii is on the west of the island. The long white sandy beach that looks out to Ko Raed is good for swimming. A trail along the canal leads to Klong Yai Gii Waterfall. Accommodation is available.

Klong Hin Beach is on the west of the island near Klong Hin Cape and Phrao Bay. The beach is about 300 m. long and the clear waters are good for swimming. Klong Hin Cape is a beautiful diving site and is the location of Klong Hin Hut.

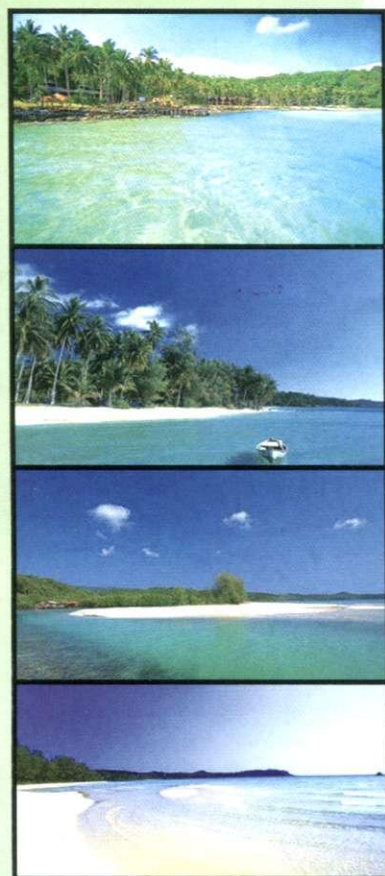

Phrao Bay is near Thien Cape and is the southernmost of the western beaches. Its white sandy beach has clear blue waters and is lined with coconut palms. Ko Kut Ao Phrao Beach Resort is located here.

Bang Bao Bay is a small coconut lined bay that is good for swimming and has a tranquil atmosphere. Two inexpensive resorts charge between 300–800 Baht. Behind the bay is a laterite road that will allow you to enjoy the natural environment by bike. The road cuts through forest and coconut plantations on the way to Salad Bay.

Tapaw Bay is on the east of the island. It is another long white sandy beach. The only type of accommodation here are bungalows surrounded by coconut palms.

Activities on Ko Kood

There is no ring road around the island; just a single road cutting east to west from Salad Bay to Bang Bao Bay. Therefore, access between beaches and bays on Ko Kood is rather difficult; boats are the best option. However, motorcycling along the road is quite interesting since you can enjoy the nature whilst bumping along. There are several dive sites around Ko Kood, with numerous species of fish to discover. Canoeing to explore the mangrove forest is possible at Klong Jaow. Night fishing and squid catching is also an option.
